_____ (initial here) I am responsible for the books I borrow from The Nonsense Library. I will return them on time in good condition. If I lose them, tear them or damage them in any way I will have to replace them after standing on my head for 17 minutes. If I do not have money, I will work for The Nonsense Library to pay to replace the book writing posts or doing research or other helpful tasks.

Fees / Terms of Condition: Each book loan has a due date because we cannot bear to be without each and every one of our books for long periods of time (separation anxiety, we suppose). Return it on time or pay 5 shillings a day, each day it is late until 31 days past the due date at which point you will pay the amount listed on the cover to replace it whilst singing your national anthem as loud as possible. At any time after the due date, if you return the book in the same condition you received it; the fees will be reduced in half and we will hug you 16 times (20 if you return on time in the first place!).
